Which Will You Do?

Patrick Dunn

When a man thinks everything
Is going his way,
His defenses slip,
And life can wound deeply, sorely.

He can look around and find
An old tree stump,
Sit in his sorrow,
Blame the world, and bleed his life away;
'Til he shrivels up,
And soon must die;
Then blows away,
With the wind,
Leaving no trace of his life behind,
To be remembered by.

OR

He can stand up tall and bind the wound
And keep on going;
Get on with living:
Succeeding and failing,
Laughing and crying,
Singing and sighing,
In joy and sadness.
Sorrow and gladness,
In coming and going,
In reaping and sowing —
Living and dying —
But the world knows he has been here.
Which will you do?

Painting Is Silent Poetry,
and Poetry Is Painting That Speaks.

Simonides, 475 B.C.

The Briarwood Art Show included paintings, drawings, batiks, ceramics and prints by middle upper students.
